I don't enjoy many shooter-type games. This one, however, caught my attention because of its bright, neon-ish appearance (yes, I'm the type of person who totally jumps for graphics). And probably because both the videos and screenshots looked kinda weird. I tend to like weird games. School of the Dead is the story about a cute neon-pinky girl named - you would never guess. - Anastasia. She sits in class when suddenly a strange accident happens. In a short period of time the school is filled with hideous monsters. Anastasia must find her little brother and needs to get out before it's too late. It might be me being a noob, but I think the game would really benefit from clear instructions or a user's guide in the menu. The controls are not that intuitive and the use of a trial-and-error method quickly leads to frustration, particularly in crisis situations where a bunch of angry monsters are rapidly approaching, while your main character is moving extremely slowly. (At least I didn't know how to speed her up.) Another small thing is that I'm not a fan of the combination of using the mouse in your right hand and the keyboard (WASD) in your left hand, I would prefer the arrow buttons or even better: a controller. But hey, I will survive. Overall a nice, silly, funny game. Brainless? A bit perhaps, but who cares, that's the charm.
